The Artverse

Raja Ravi Varma's iconic oil-on-canvas Yashoda and Krishna sold for ₹167.2 crore at an auction in April 2026

In the dynamic world of art, collectors are looking beyond familiar names, galleries are widening their rosters, and artists from different generations and geographies are attracting new audiences. Punctuating this excitement is a more practical conversation about what makes a work worth collecting. KISHORE SINGH, writer, columnist, critic, and curator, summons his perspective to the shifts shaping the art world today.