

An exhibition curated by Dr Amin Jaffer for The India Pavilion at the 61st Venice Biennale Arte

ART IN ACTION

MOOD OF THE MOMENT

Nilima Sheikh: Fractured Skies, the recently concluded exhibition of the artist's works at The Museum of Modern Art in New York

1 THE BIENNALE BOOM

Venice may have set the template, but the biennale has become a global art-world format. In 2026, India is back at Venice after a seven-year gap, with Amin Jaffer curating the national pavilion, Geographies of Distance: Remembering Home. Back home, the Kochi-Muziris Biennale is already established; the second edition of the Bengal Biennale opens this November, while the big buzz, of course, is around the India Art, Architecture & Design Biennale in New Delhi in December, which promises to spill across the city's monuments and institutional spaces. Expect a full-on extravaganza, complete with bells and whistles.

2 ON THE COLLECTORS' RADAR

The pre-moderns and moderns are commanding the market, the contemporaries are having their day, but on my money, I'll wager on Nilima Sheikh being the artist of the moment whose presence and values are set to skyrocket with her show 'Fractured Skies' currently on view at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. That she is an artist whose works are already scarce means she's the one collectors will be chasing.

PHOTO GETTY IMAGES