

possibilities extend well beyond the motorcycle itself.

The company recently conducted the GS Experience in India, an initiative that introduces riders to the nuances of adventure motorcycling, from mastering their machines to developing responsible and disciplined riding habits to boot. Beyond domestic experiences, BMW Motorrad also offers opportunities to participate in international riding events, giving enthusiasts a chance to explore new terrain and connect with a larger global community of like-minded riders.

"India's premium motorcycle market is being propelled by a progressive generation that views mobility as a definitive expression of personality, passion, and achievement," shares Shardenduu Chaturvedi, Director at BMW Motorrad India. "At BMW Motorrad India, we see surging demand across segments, especially among enthusiasts who value exploration and community. Backed by transforming road infrastructure and a mature riding culture, India is fast cementing its position as a premier global hub for luxury two-wheelers—a powerful momentum that will only accelerate."

THE COMMUNITY CULTURE

Beyond manufacturers, motorcycle clubs fuel premium biking aspirations, offering riders camaraderie, shared adventures and belonging through a collective passion extending beyond motorcycles themselves.

For instance, Dr Arun Thareja, an ENT surgeon, has witnessed India's motorcycling culture evolve from a commuter-driven market into a lifestyle centred on performance, travel, and community. Riding has always been more than a passion for him. In fact, having completed 40 years with bikes, he still owns the 1985 Yamaha RD 350 that started it all.

In the late 1990s, when superbikes were rare, Thareja—affectionately known as "Doc" in the industry—began organising Sunday rides with a handful of enthusiasts. In 2000, he founded GODS (Group of Delhi Superbikers), which gradually grew as imported motorcycles became more accessible. Yamaha's entry into the superbike segment in 2008, followed by other international manufacturers, marked a significant turning point.

Doc believes the past decade, particularly the post-pandemic period, has transformed motorcycling. The arrival of accessible performance motorcycles from KTM, Royal Enfield, Triumph, Aprilia, and other brands has brought more enthusiasts into the fold. He is equally encouraged by the growth of India's riding gear industry and the increasing participation of women in the field.

Through GODS, Doc organises domestic and international expeditions, strengthening riding communities. However, the 40 per cent GST on motorcycles above 350cc and road safety concerns, remain major hurdles in the path. India's premium motorcycling market is expanding, driven by camaraderie, shared experiences and a passion that increasingly defines riders' lifestyles. ■

Above, from left: In September 2026, Royal Enfield's One Ride united over 1,50,000 bikers across 60 countries; Dr Arun Thareja, who founded Group of Delhi Superbikers (GODS) in 2000