THE BEST LESSONS I LEARNT

VIKRAM MISRI
Foreign Secretary of India, Batch of 1986

"At XLRI, I was the only one with a degree in history in a class full of engineers, mathematicians and economics graduates. So, instead of finance, I turned my attention to the behavioural aspects of management. Ultimately, the most important lesson was that decisions are often made in situations where resources such as time, capital and attention are limited. Instead of hunting for perfect answers, it's more important to frame problems clearly, gather enough data to reduce uncertainty, weigh the costs of inaction against those of action and commit, while being ready to adjust."

SANDEEP BAKSHI
Managing Director & CEO, ICICI Bank
Batch of 1983

"Fr E.H. McGrath, one of the founding fathers of XLRI, taught us that true leadership rests on humility and the courage to embrace opportunities with an open heart. We also learnt the importance of gratitude, sewa bhav and resilience, and that the means are always more important than the end. The motto 'Excellence with Integrity' and the call to act 'For the Greater Good' became lifelong anchors."

PRERANA ISSAR
Venture capitalist and former Chief People Officer, NHS England
Batch of 1997

"The most valuable lesson I learnt at XLRI was that there is no single way to lead. Effective leadership must adapt to the organisation, its circumstances and the wider environment. Closely linked to this is learning agility. Skills and competencies cannot remain static in a constantly changing world. These two lessons have guided me through leadership roles across sectors."

including its flagship programmes in Business Management (BM) and Human Resource Management (HRM), Logistics and Supply Chain Management (LSCM), the Fellow Programme in Management (FPM), and the BM International Specialization Programme. Its academic approach combines rigorous classroom learning with industry engagement, experiential learning, research and social-impact initiatives.

XLRI's 'Triple Crown' credentials—accreditations from AACSB (Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business), AMBA (Association of MBAs) and EQUIS (EFMD Quality Improvement System)—alongside the National Board of Accreditation anchor its commitment to academic quality and global standards. Its international standing received a further boost with a 33rd-place finish in the Financial Times Masters in Management Ranking 2026, a climb of 25 places from the previous year. The institute's strong industry connections translate into tangible recruitment outcomes. For the graduating class of 2024-26 across its PGDM (BM) and PGDM (HRM) programmes, the average salary stood at Rs 31.4 lakh per annum, with a median of Rs 29 lakh. ■

STUDENTSPEAK

SAAVI MILIND NATEKAR
PGDM, Business Management, 2nd year

"Three things stand out at XLRI: a culture of synergy, a diverse cohort that broadened my thinking, and close faculty-student relationships"
