

THE ROAD AHEAD

Nitin Gadkari, Union Minister of Road Transport & Highways

» Gadkari highlighted the evolving role of women in India's growth journey. "Indian women entrepreneurs are now leading," he said

» "From the textile to the hospitality industry, and to the electronics industry, women have a huge contribution," Gadkari said, adding that one should keep trying to excel despite the ups and downs in business

» "Inspiration and motivation will go a long way," the minister added

REINVENTING A LEGACY

Nyrika Holkar, ED, Godrej Enterprises Group

» Holkar said the next phase of growth at Godrej Enterprises Group will be shaped by India's evolving needs—from energy-efficient appliances and battery storage to logistics

» "Legacy can earn you trust and confidence, but it doesn't earn you preference," she said. "That has to be earned in every generation"

MONEY, MARKETS & POWER

(From left) Amisha Vora, Chairperson & MD, PL Capital Group
Praveena Rai, MD & CEO, MCX
Ritu Gangrade Arora, Country Head—India, Allianz Services
Anjali Bansal, Founding Partner, Avaana Capital
Priti Rathi Gupta, Founder, LXME & Co-promoter, Anand Rathi

» On equity markets, Vora said, "These are the times when you should hold your nerves, remain invested, add a little more, but not do that with a quick-profit idea." She pointed to a large economy, a young population, domestic demand, and new sectors as key advantages for India

» Rai said the time has never been better for commodity markets. "We are growing very fast. But it is still at a nascent stage. We need to expand awareness," she said

» "We strategically believe in the India story," said Arora, who feels markets may be going through a temporary correction

» Bansal said while India has grown a lot over the last 15 years, the next decade would need to focus more on developing core capabilities

» Gupta, who has witnessed multiple market cycles, echoed Vora's thoughts, saying women are inherently long-term investors
