

The partnership with DP World PGTI combines Business Today's corporate network with the professional tour's experience in golf, with the aim of taking the game to a wider audience.

"We aim to encourage India Inc to experience the discipline, patience, and sportsmanship that golf represents. It is encouraging to see Business Today and DP World PGTI working together to take the sport to a wider audience," Dev said.

Dinesh Bhatia, Group CEO of the India Today Group, said BT Golf had built a platform connecting business and sport over the years.

"BT Golf has, over the years, created a distinctive platform at the intersection of sport and business. By strengthening our partnership with the DP World PGTI, we are committed to expanding the horizons of Indian golf, making it more visible," he said.

For DP World PGTI, the association also offers professional golfers an opportunity to connect with corporate India. "Our partnership with Business Today brings together the worlds of professional golf and corporate India," CEO Amandeep Johl said.

Alok Nair, Chief Operating Officer of Business Today, said the platform had spent more than two decades bringing executives from different industries together through golf. "What makes BT Golf truly special is the community it has built while being India's first corporate golf platform for 27 years," he said.

Apart from Kolkata, the eight-city championship will span across Chandigarh, Hyderabad, Gurugram, Chennai, Kochi, Mumbai and Bengaluru. The organisers are looking to build on the platform's corporate following and widen the sport's reach across business centres. BT
