

Luxury in India has evolved beyond the traditional parameters of price, rarity and ownership to encompass access, personalisation, service and experience"

PUSHPA BECTOR
GROUP EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
AND BUSINESS HEAD, DLF RETAIL

Fashion found that nearly 30% of affluent respondents spent ₹2 lakh or more annually on travel and wellness, while 17% spent that amount on fine dining and gourmet experiences.

This increasing appetite for exclusive experiences is being fed by the staggering rise in India's super rich. The country's count of dollar millionaire families shot up 90% to 871,700 in 2025 from 458,000 in 2021, according to the Mercedes-Benz Hurun India Wealth Report and Luxury Consumer Survey 2025.

BEYOND THE BUCKET LIST

For India's ultra-high-net-worth travellers, conventional luxury holidays are no longer enough.

"These are people who have already done most things on their bucket lists. So, now it's like, what's next?" says Rohan Prakash, founder and CEO of New Delhi-based travel company UnWild Planet, which specialises in bespoke expedition-led travel.

For a Mumbai family, the answer was a visit to an Inca archaeological excavation site in Peru, with an archaeologist to explain its history. Another family enjoyed a curated culinary experience at a Chilean

1

2