The trend has also reached Gir, where Aramness has developed a luxury hospitality proposition around the Asiatic lion. Domestic travellers account for 75% of guests at its 18-kothi property. For the coming peak season, standard *kothi*s are priced from ₹72,000, while family *kothi*s start at ₹97,500.

"The Asiatic lion brings people to Gir but is rarely the only thing our guests talk about when they leave," says Jimmy Patel, founder, Aramness. Beyond safaris, guests can experience birding, jungle walks, Maldhari community visits, wellness, and locally sourced cuisine.

In Assam, Rhino & River Wildlife Retreat and Spa, near Pobitora Wildlife Sanctuary , is building a luxury proposition around one-horned rhinoceros encounters, Brahmaputra experiences, and local culture. Guests are staying an average of two to three nights, suggesting that newer wildlife destinations can attract travellers beyond conventional safari circuits.

It has also been welcomed into the Small Luxury Hotels of the World collection—a curated global collection of more than 700 independently owned and operated luxury boutique hotels across over 100 countries.
