In that instant, it became clear that Rahul had evolved into an ambassador of love, determined to ensure that the bloodshed in his life would not be replicated in anyone else's. As he uttered the poignant words, 'Gandhi ji taught me, if you want to live, then live without fear, else no need to live. So I have given this chance to them to change my T-shirt colour—let it be red.' A profound tremor resonated through the minds of those present. I stood there, unable to recover from the shock, witnessing the sacrifice driven by a love and compassion that transcended everything else!
