I think all of us have a long way to go to fight the many myths that the BJP has spread to construct a new reality. The fight against these myths, or more accurately mithyas (lies), can't be fought with other mithyas. Falsehoods need to be countered with truth, which is what the Bharat Jodo Yatra started out to do. I think two key myths that were busted for many of us were about Rahul as a person and about the Congress party itself. Rahul is exceptionally compassionate and ideologically sharp. And the Congress party has many young people who are equally ideological and sharp. So we progressives must shed our reticence and put our faith in them, for they will undoubtedly serve both the party and the nation well. The path to reclaim India is arduous, but there is no other option. This war has to be fought on various levels and if we are true patriots, we must fight the one within first.
