Me: I am irreligious.

Rahul: But you must have been born into some religion, right?

Me: Yes, I am a Hindu by birth.

Rahul: So have you read the Vedas?

Me: No. I haven't!

Rahul: I have. All of them. Do you think all those who claim they are Hindu or Sikh or Muslim have really gone through the pain of reading their respective scriptures?

Me: I hardly think so …

Rahul: So when they suddenly start claiming how proud they are of being Hindu, on what premise do they base this on?

Me: True …

Rahul: This creation of false pride in you leads to extremism and then the fear of other religions gives the RSS control over you. Once people start figuring this out and start becoming humans first, before anything else, we will overcome the BJP's line of thought.

Me: Inshallah, we will …

Rahul: [Putting his elbow on my shoulder and coming closer] Are you Hindu or Muslim? You just said 'Inshallah'. You told me you are Hindu.

Me: I also said I am irreligious and I don't think religions make one human better or different from another. We are all the same.

Rahul: [With a big smile on his face] See, you are already there. That's how it should be …

Me: Ha! That's right!

Rahul: Are you an atheist?

Me: No. I am indifferent.
