information, and willful communication of classified communications intelligence information to an unauthorized person. The second two charges were violations of the Espionage Act, just as Snowden had anticipated. The charges were each punishable by up to ten years in prison, for a total of 30 years. The criminal complaint was made public one week later, on June 21. Two days later, the State Department canceled Snowden's passport.

Snowden did not learn about the criminal charges or his voided passport until he landed in Moscow. He had
