

WikiLeaks created a website to raise legal funds for Snowden in 2013.

States, and be judged by a jury of his peers—not hide behind the cover of an authoritarian regime."[13]

On January 1, 2014, the editorial boards of the New York Times and the Guardian newspapers urged forgiveness for Snowden. "Considering the enormous value of the information he has revealed, and the abuses he has exposed," wrote the editorial board of the New York Times, "Mr. Snowden deserves better than a life of permanent exile. . . . He may have committed a crime to do so, but he has done his country a great service."[14] The editorial board agreed with Snowden's claims that he had taken the only course of action available to
