these networks, while smaller banks, such as the Development Bank of the Great Lakes, have yet to sign any agreements. On average, established IOs sign new agreements every two to three years, indicating that information sharing is a common and sustained practice.