

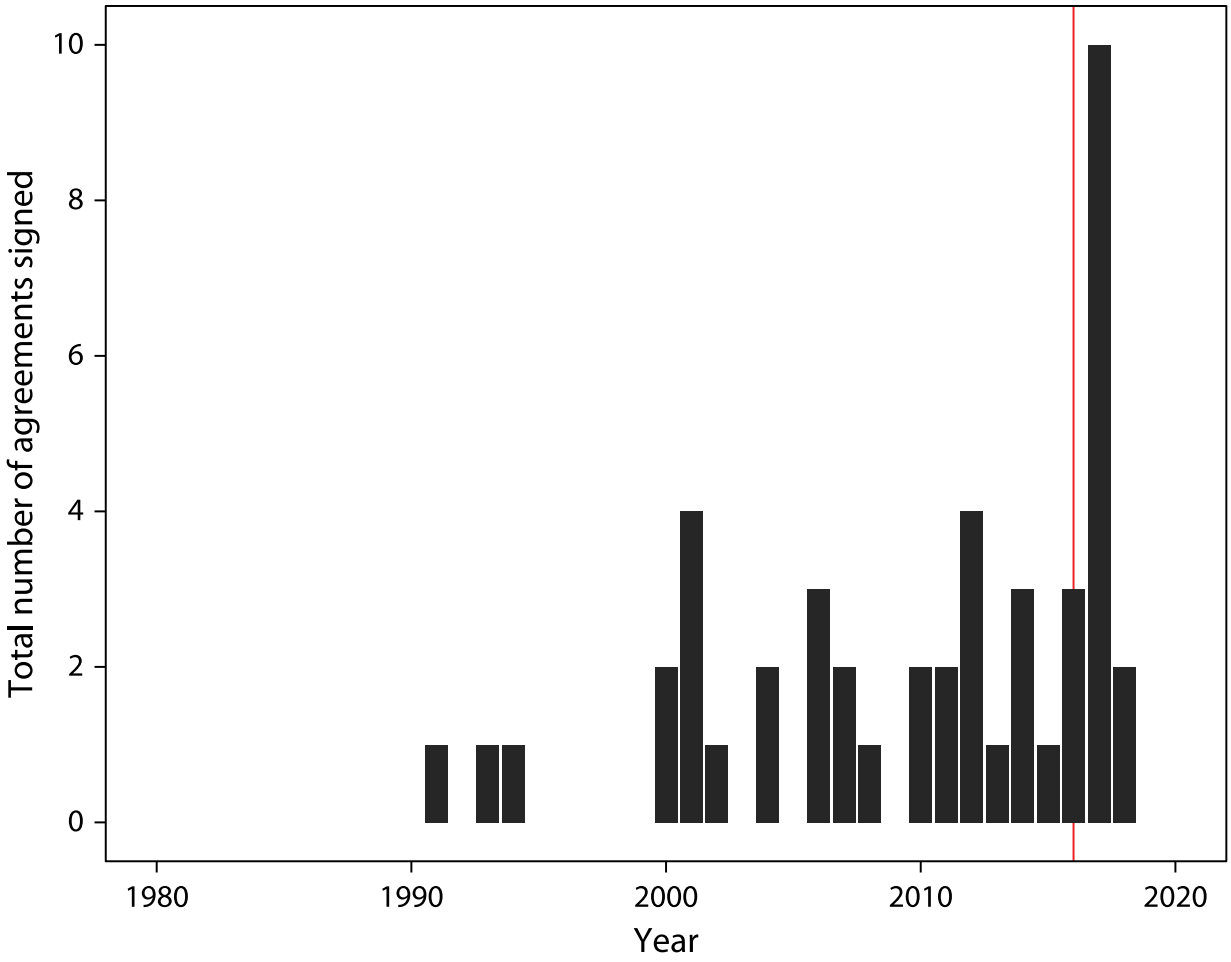

FIGURE 4.4. Number of information sharing agreements signed by US-led development IOs, 1980–2018. The vertical line demarcates 2016 (the year of Trump's election).

Before Trump's election, US-led IOs had limited interaction with the Coordination Group (CG) institutions, despite decades of potential collaboration. However, following Trump's inauguration, these IOs signed multiple agreements with CG institutions, likely aiming to diversify their informational inputs, as shown in figure 4.5. This pivot highlights a strategic effort to compensate for the anticipated reduction in US-sourced data. While we are unable to observe specific flows of information between US- and Arab-led IOs, it is likely that at least some of the information sharing pertained to elite-driven areas like energy and the environment that are prone to populist withholding, as the prior chapter illustrated. Given that American and Arab IOs had more than three decades of opportunities to cooperate
