Tactic	Examples
	• US Congress delaying contributions to the World Bank and United Nations. • Freezing of funding to UNRWA by the US and European states.
Effort withholding	• Populist states ignoring WTO rulings or skipping IMF and World Bank Board meetings. • Refusal to comply with IO regulations or norms, undermining collaboration.
Information manipulation	• Withholding or falsifying economic data critical for IMF assessments. • Erosion of domestic data collection mechanisms under populist regimes. • Spreading misinformation about IOs to fuel public mistrust.
Co-optation	• Appointment of David Malpass to lead the World Bank, deprioritizing climate initiatives. • Use of WTO national security exceptions to impose tariffs, as seen under Trump. • Delegates from rights-abusing states co-opting human rights organizations.
Toxic communication	• Scapegoating IOs through speeches, tweets, and campaign slogans. • Greece's Syriza party criticizing the IMF during elections but negotiating with it in power. • Amplification of conspiracy theories to undermine IO credibility.

2.2.1 Exit

Few actions demonstrate dissatisfaction with IOs more dramatically than a state's decision to exit. Since World War II, there have been more than 200 cases of IO withdrawal, and this trend has accelerated in recent years, fueled by the rise of populist politics (von Borzyskowski and Vabulas
