STORYBOARDS BY RICHARD BENNETT LAMAS

"Each character's strengths, skills, and personality dictated the chain of events," Bennett says. "Hawkeye is pretty much special ops, so he moves and operates as such—relying not only on his skills, but on weapons, as well. The goal was to make him almost invisible in the first half of the scene—cunning, to the point he could fool Vision and his arsenal of technology. The idea was to keep the suspense or mystery about who, or what, was intruding into the compound."

