After portraying Rumlow in Marvel's Captain America: The Winter Soldier, actor Frank Grillo embraced the return of the nihilistic mercenary with a "sense of mayhem." "I love villains, and I thought this would be a great opportunity to have just an unapologetic, murderous, venomous villain who could kind of stand his ground with these super heroes."

The final costume's appearance mirrored Fuentebella's concept, and brought the character to life in a visceral and grounded way. "To me, the look of it was kind of post-apocalyptic," Grillo says. "It wasn't clean, and it looked like he had put it together himself from whatever he had laying around. It suits the character. When I get in the suit, I feel mean—I feel angry."

Rodney Fuentebella concept art.