

"In this pass on the design I was focusing on showing how the Vibranium weave could work as a costume mimicking human anatomy," Concept Artist Jerad Marantz says. "Conceptually, the hardest thing about this is that the only other example of this metal that we see in the cinematic universe is Captain America's shield. My solution was to make the costume a combination of rigid plates and Vibranium woven strips that emulate the character's muscles."

 Jerad Marantz concept art.

