"Second, the mask," Meinerding continues. "The domino mask stretches back to Bucky's comic-book roots. We did different variations—whether it was face paint or goggles or a full mask, we needed some way to conceal Winter Soldier's identity for a portion of the movie when the audience and Steve weren't supposed to recognize him. Unfortunately, it's just really hard to do a domino mask because it doesn't fit with anything that we think of as the real world. The closest we got was actually doing face paint, but I'm still excited we got something that resembled the domino mask."

Ryan Meinerding concept art.