Markovsky found developing the fabrics to be the most challenging aspect of creating costumes for Captain America: The Winter Soldier. "We wanted something that looked more like real fabric—Kevlar or high-tech nylons. But because of all the action they must have stretch," Markovsky says. "I didn't want to see any printing or stretchiness—just texture. The collaboration with the genius costume cutters, Dale Wibben and Marilyn Madsen, and tailor, Dennis Kim, is what really makes these costumes come to life."
