

Again, as the storyboards flesh out the visual concepts and the pre-vis develops their viability for principal photography, the visual effects coordinator is always thinking ahead to the tasks associated with bringing everything to the final cut. A closer look inside these movie stills indicates the degree to which practical shots are mixed with computer imagery.

NELSON: "The background in the rooftop shots includes real elements that have been ripped apart and put back together through CG. Both characters are CG as well. ILM did a lot of this repurposing for us."
