Page 54-55: Paint tests for Mark II and Mark III armor (Stan Winston Studio)

To determine what the final color choices for the Mark II and III armors would be, Stan Winston Studio applied various techniques to designer Miles Tevis' helmet maquettes (a small design replica or model) to try to find the right balance of color that would look good on film.

SAUNDERS: "For the red and gold, we used brushed red plating over nickel plating. For the Mark II, we went with brushed chrome."
