

MAHAN: "The Mark III had to show that it grew organically throughout the course of the film. And we did not want it to look like a 'man in a suit.' If you look at all the great men in suits from the past — C-3PO, Robocop, Bicentennial Man — there were things that we could learn from them, but we wanted to move beyond them."

