

Latcham: "Stark Industries doesn't make weapons anymore. What do they do? What's his new thing? And so that evolved very quickly from let's just have a little Stark World thing to let's put on this gigantic Stark Expo. And it very quickly went from this one little image to this gigantic expo. Next thing you know Mike Riva, our production designer, has a guy drawing buildings. You see all these huge, wide shots and people are photographing Flushing Meadow Park from above in a helicopter and you're like, how did all this come together so quickly? Stark Expo now has become this gigantic centerpiece for the movie. So we were putting all this together for the beginning of the film and obviously if we're going through all that much trouble, then that should be where the finale happens."
