

Favreau: "Last time, [Tony] said, 'I'm not going to make weapons.' Well, what has he been doing? He's trying to bring people together and he's trying to look forward to a brighter future. I felt that that was something that was in the headlines, there seemed to be a current that was running through society; an interesting combination of tremendous cynicism about the economy and where we fit in, and what defines our nation."