

Latcham: "The thing that got Mickey involved in the movie, and got him really jazzed about it, was a piece of Ryan's concept art. Jon and Kevin met Mickey Rourke with two pieces of concept art and said, 'We want you to play this guy.' When Mickey saw it, he saw the tattoos and he saw the straps and he saw how real it looked, and he thought, 'That's cool,' and I think that Ryan's artwork was really instrumental in making that whole thing happen."

Meinerding: "When we found out it was going to be Mickey, it added a lot to the design and I ended up doing a sketch of him as that character and I think it added a whole new, gritty, dark dimension to it that's great. "

