Media Trials and Courtroom Tribulations

1. I have relied extensively on the information (court records, deposition, etc.) and analysis undertaken, collected and collated in Nirmalangshu Mukherji's December 13: Terror Over Democracy, published by Promilla & Co. Publishers in association with Bibliophile South Asia, New Delhi and Chicago, in 2005. I have also relied on the report of the meeting to discuss the media trial of S.A.R. Geelani held at Sarai, CSDS, and on conversations I have had with Nandita Haksar and Vrinda Grover.

   For more information on the 13 December case, see the website of the All India Defence Committee for S.A.R. Geelani. Also see Nandita Haksar's article in Sarai Reader 04, Tripta Wahi's article in Sarai Reader 05 and an earlier posting by me on the Reader List: 'The Worst Is Always Precise': http://mail.sarai.net/pipermail/reader-list/2002-December/002080.html, which has links to several newspaper reports relevant to the 13 December case.

2. Readers interested in the murky history of the involvement of European State intelligence agencies under the ambit of 'Operation Gladio' to 'create' incidents of terrorism and sustain a 'strategy of tension' particularly in Italy are advised to refer to 'Fascism and the Establishment: Italy and the Strategy of Tension': http://struggle.ws/freeearth/fe3italy.html. Google searches incorporating the words 'Gladio, P2, Italy, Belgium' are also likely to yield interesting results.

   An equally interesting though less candid account of the work of intelligence agencies in India, particularly the IB, by a former intelligence operative, can be found in Maloy Krishna Dhar's Open Secrets: India's Intelligence Unveiled, Manas Publication, Delhi, 2005.
