Brilliantly Dyslexic Screens Film 'WHAT IS DYSLEXIA?'

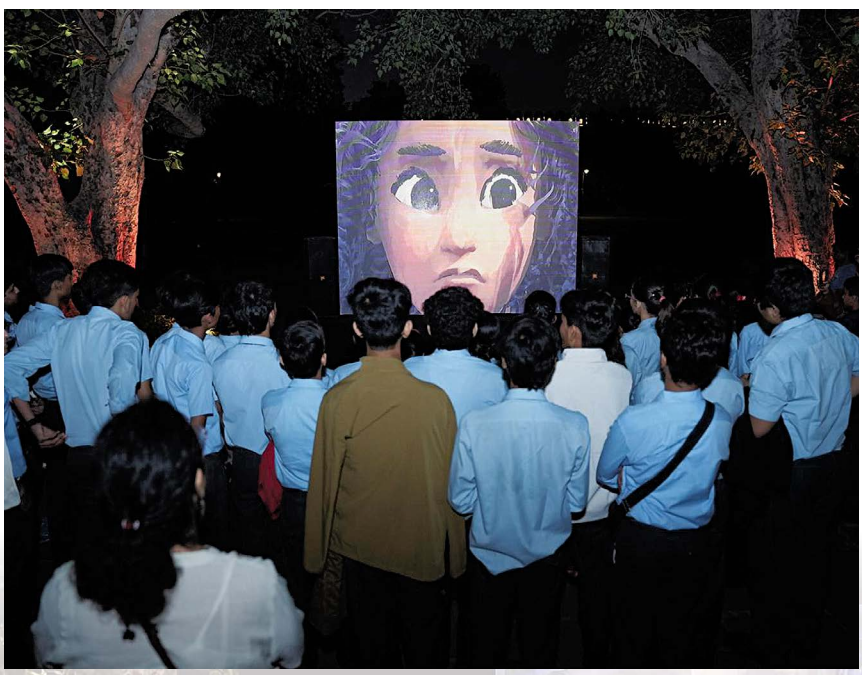

As Dyslexia Awareness Month draws to a close, Brilliantly Dyslexic - an initiative by the JKC Foundation (the philanthropic arm of J.K. Cement Ltd.) - along with Orkids Foundation, organized a special screening of the short film What Is Dyslexia? at the Red Fort. Produced by Made By Dyslexia, a global charity led by successful dyslexics, the film aims to shift the narrative from challenge to strength.

> "We are absolutely thrilled to see our beautiful film What Is Dyslexia? screened in both English and Hindi at India's iconic Red Fort. What an extraordinary setting to share such an important message: dyslexia is a different and brilliant way of thinking. Every dyslexic child deserves to recognise their brilliance, and we hope this film will inspire children, families and educators across India to see dyslexia in a whole new light."
>
> Kate Griggs
>
> Founder, Made By Dyslexia & Executive Producer, What Is Dyslexia?

Hosted at the Red Fort Sound & Light Show, developed by Dalmia Bharat (Monument Mitra of Red Fort) in partnership with the Sabhyata Foundation, the screening leveraged an iconic heritage site to encourage a deeper understanding of dyslexia, highlighting diverse learning needs and the importance of building a more inclusive and supportive environment for individuals with dyslexia.

At the heart of the screening was What Is Dyslexia?, an inspiring short film produced by Made By Dyslexia, a global charity led by successful dyslexics. Founded by advocate Kate Griggs, Made By Dyslexia works worldwide to revolutionize how society views dyslexic minds. The charity emphasizes that dyslexic individuals possess extraordinary talents in creative problem-solving, lateral thinking, spatial awareness, and innovation.

Screened in both English and Hindi, the film prompts audiences to look past traditional learning struggles and recognize the value of Dyslexic Thinking. By bringing this global resource to India, Brilliantly Dyslexic and Made By Dyslexia aim to inspire educators, parents, and communities to empower dyslexic learners.

The screening was graced by Dr. Raghavpat Singhania and Mrs. Sonam Singhania, founders of Brilliantly Dyslexic, alongside Dr. Geet Oberoi, founder of Orkids Foundation, renowned educators, and parents. Drawing an unprecedented turnout at the venue, the event highlighted the crucial role that collaborative efforts and public spaces play in building a more informed and supportive environment for individuals with dyslexia play in building a more informed and supportive environment for individuals with dyslexia.

> "Building an inclusive society begins with awareness and understanding. Dyslexia is often misunderstood, and it is important that we build greater awareness of how differently people learn, think and express themselves. Our focus on education and social responsibility drives us to support initiatives that empower individuals to thrive. The Film "What is Dyslexia" created by Made by Dyslexia, beautifully captures the essence of this condition, highlighting that it is not just a learning but a different way of thinking. Through this initiative we aim to build a society that appreciates the unique strengths and potential of every individual. Furthermore, bringing this conversation to a prominent historical monument like the Red Fort gave us an opportunity to reach a wider audience and encourage a more informed and empathetic perspective. Initiatives like these can help individuals with dyslexia feel appreciated for their strengths and potential."
>
> Dr. Raghavpat Singhania
>
> Managing Director, J.K. Cement Ltd. and Founder, Brilliantly Dyslexic

To watch the film and access learning resources, visit: https://www.whatisdyslexia.org/