Part II

Quantum Dissidents

We emphasize not only that our view is that of a minority but also that current interest in such questions is small. The typical physicist feels that they have long been answered, and that he will fully understand just how if ever he can spare 20 minutes to think about it.

—John Bell and Michael Nauenberg, 1966