independently of us; there’s no need to think we bring reality into existence by observing or thinking about it.